SUMMER 2023: Tailgate Like a Tiger | Ryan Silverfield '03 | Spotted on the Hill | Congratulations Class of 2023!

TIGER TAILGATING

LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT

Like all issues of the Record, this current issue aims to convey the vitality of our College and the outcomes of the educational experience we offer.

A tradition that epitomizes the vitality of the Hampden-Sydney experience is tailgating. In this issue, learn how to tailgate like a Tiger with everything from the ideal tailgate location and the right gameday gear to food and drink inspiration from alumni like John Currence '87. John—chef, restaurateur, and entrepreneur extraordinaire who joined us for Family Weekend last fall—gives all of his best tips in his latest book, Tailgreat: How to Crush It at Tailgating.

John is one of several alumni who have published books in recent years, including Chris Stirewalt '97, Chris Altizer '84, Matt Eversmann '88, William F. Meehan '77, and Jonathan Martin '99. We were pleased to host several of these authors during the past year and to have them share insights from their books with members of our campus community.

Our faculty also models the scholarship, creativity, and curiosity we seek to foster in our students. At a reception honoring faculty achievement in February, we recognized over 15 faculty members who had published books and articles during the past three years. At this year's Final Convocation, we honored Professor Victor Szabo with the John Peter Mettauer Excellence in Research Award, noting the publication of his book, Turn On, Tune In, Drift Off: Ambient Music's Psychedelic Past. And, we've recently learned of the publication of a book edited by Professors Evan Davis and Nick Nace, Teaching Modern British and American Satire.

This issue of the Record also includes a feature on Ryan Silverfield '03, head coach of the University of Memphis football team. I also want to acknowledge alumni coaches Ryan Odom '96 and Griff Aldrich '96, who were among the 25 finalists for the 2022-23 Skip Prosser Man of the Year Award—a prize given to NCAA Division I basketball coaches who “not only achieve success on the basketball court but who display moral integrity off of it as well.” I can think of no better evidence of this College's commitment to the simultaneous development of competence and character, which is a tradition in our Athletics program.

Early this summer, we welcomed alumni of all ages back to campus for Alumni Weekend along with many of their family members. We especially enjoyed hosting and celebrating the 50th reunion of a large group from the class of 1973. Many of the returning alumni hadn't visited the campus for many years and were delighted by what they saw.

Regardless of when you last returned to campus, we'd be pleased to see you during this coming academic year. We want you to see what's new or newly renovated on campus and what's new and enjoyable in nearby Farmville. What you'll find hasn't changed are the College's commitment to its 248-year old mission “to form good men and good citizens,” the speaking tradition that is a hallmark of our campus culture, and the rich fellowship of the Hampden-Sydney brotherhood.

TAILGATE like a TIGER

THE ULTIMATE H-SC TAILGATE GUIDE

ALEXANDRA EVANS

Legend has it that modern tailgating began at the Princeton-Rutgers matchup of 1869. Credit where credit is due: we've taken some inspiration from Princeton along the way with our founding and emphasis on rhetoric. When it comes to how best to enjoy an autumnal Saturday, though, we kudzu-swathed big cats can show those ivy-clad Tigers a thing or two.

After all, Hampden-Sydney tailgating has earned media spots in Town & Country, Southern Living, and even on a national ABC broadcast. On any given Saturday in the fall, Hampden-Sydney comes out in force and in style for a spot at one of the best parties in the South.

Here's what you need to tailgate like a Tiger.

PRIME LOCATION

The Founders Lot is undeniably the place to see and be seen on gameday. Open to members of the Society of Founders, the Founders Lot offers the perfect location to set up and chill out while waiting for kickoff, which you can conveniently watch without leaving the Lot!

The Founders Lot is about more than sporting, though; it's about supporting. "As a distinguished group of dedicated donors, the Society of Founders plays a pivotal role at Hampden-Sydney College and serves as the foundation of fundraising for the institution," says Matt Weber, director of annual giving. "Through their generous support and unwavering commitment, members of the Society provide critical resources that touch nearly every part the College and enrich the educational experience for our students. Their support and leadership serve to foster a culture of philanthropy and inspire others in the Tiger community to give back. Gathering in the exclusive Founders Lot on Football Saturdays serves as a great opportunity for these alumni, parents, and friends to come together, reconnect, and celebrate H-SC."

For more information, contact Matt Weber at mweber@hsc.edu or visit alumni.hsc.edu.

THE PERFECT OOTD

Lions may be king of the jungle, but Tigers are kings of the catwalk. A Hampden-Sydney man always cuts a stylish figure whether he's sporting a t-shirt or a blazer. There's a reason Southern Living named Hampden-Sydney to the Style Setters category in its 2012 tailgate contest. What's your personal panache?

The No. 1 Fan

Dressed to the Eights

Suited and Booted

A MOUTH-WATERING SPREAD

No tailgate is complete without a mouth-watering spread of pre-game fuel. This season, you could go traditional with cold fried chicken and pimiento cheese. Or you could be the talk of the lot by taking a page out of Tailgreat: How to Crush it at Tailgating by renowned chef John Currence '87.

Wow your guests and be the envy of your neighbors with Roasted Chicken Enchiladas, which Currence first experimented with while he was a senior at Hampden-Sydney. Currence says that at the time, he was not necessarily an aspiring chef, but he had a hankering for Mexican food one night. He bought what he imagined he needed to make enchiladas and what he knew he needed to make margaritas...in case the enchiladas weren't up to snuff. Lucky for us, Currence has perfected this recipe over the years along with dozens of other showstoppers such as Grilled Portobello and Provolone Sliders, White Bean and Chicken Chili with Cornbread Croutons, Warm Caramelized Onion and Blue Cheese Dip, and even Grilled Wedge Salad on a Stick.

A REFRESHING DRINK

Football may be in the fall, but Virginia temperatures don't get the memo until halfway through the season. To keep cool, a refreshing beverage is a must.

You may have sampled the spirited concoctions crafted by Jeff Norris—vice president of enrollment by day, talented mixologist by 5:00—at past tailgates or even at this year's Reunion. His latest creation, Cherry Chalgrove, blends the warmth of J.H. Bards Toasted High Rye Whiskey (Jason Hardy '98, president and CFO) and the smoothness of Campesino Rum (Hatton Smith '16, owner) with the brightness of tart cherry juice in a cocktail that is sure to have your guests cheering before the game even starts.

For more alumni-owned brands who are delivering delicious drinkables such as Farmville's own Three Roads Brewing or Richmond-based Buskey Cider, visit the alumni-owned business directory at alumni.hsc.edu.

Cherry Chalgrove

INGREDIENTS

- 1 oz JH Bards Toasted High Rye Whiskey
- 2 oz Campesino Silver X Rum
- 2 oz Tart Cherry Juice
- ¼ oz agave
- 3 dashes of orange bitters

INSTRUCTIONS

- Shake and pour over fresh ice
- Express an orange peel around the rim and use as garnish along with a frozen black cherry

AMBIANCE

You've got the outfit, the food, and the bevvy. To really set off the game day mood, deck your spot in the lot in garnet and gray. Whatever you need, the Campus Store has you covered. Seriously. Need a tent? Got you covered. A tablecloth? Got you covered. A drink koozie? We can cover that too.

Create the ultimate gameday ambiance with banners, blankets, and bag chairs. Be sure to bring the essentials like plates, cups, utensils, napkins, trash bags, and cleaning supplies. Most importantly though, don't forget to enjoy yourself! Tailgating can quickly become a wearisome task for even the most seasoned host. The point of it all is to come together to enjoy food, friends, and a whole lot of football. Everything else is just icing on the cake.

DON'T BE ALL FUN AND NO GAME!

While the 1981 Kaleidoscope may have been correct in its estimation that, at Hampden-Sydney, “the sporting life is second only to the social life,” we highly suggest that you make the trek from Founders Lot to Death Valley and check out the game up close and personal.

“When our fans are invested in a game, there’s no more intimidating venue in the ODAC,” says 23rd-year Head Coach Marty Favret. “Our players can feel the energy ringing down the Hill.”

If you haven’t yet, come see what all the fuss is about this fall. Hampden-Sydney kicks off tailgating season...ahem, football season on September 2 at home when the Tigers take on Wabash College in the fourth playing of The Gentleman’s Classic.

EYE OF THE TIGER

An outwardly laidback yet self-assured demeanor belies the grit and tenacity that simmers below the surface of University of Memphis Head Football Coach Ryan Silverfield '03. Coach Silverfield has earned the confidence he exudes through 24 years of coaching at both the college and professional levels, a journey that began while he was just a freshman economics major at Hampden-Sydney.

"I was sitting in this very chair when a shy kid showed up at my door just a few months after I arrived at the College," recounts Tiger Head Football Coach Marty Favret from his office in Kirk Athletic Center.

A good defensive player from Jacksonville, Florida, Silverfield had helped his alma mater Bolles High School to a number one ranking in the USA Today Super 25 national high school football poll. After a career-ending neck injury sidelined him, Silverfield never played a down of college football. He wasn't ready to leave the gridiron behind him, though, so he inquired about a manager position as a second-semester freshman with newly-minted Coach Favret. Silverfield continued to inquire every day for nearly two weeks before Coach Favret agreed.

"I just kept showing up saying 'I just want a chance,'" Silverfield recalls. "I said I would do whatever it took: Take out the trash. Break down game film. Anything. Football is everything to me. It's a game where you can make a difference and be a positive influence. You can impact your players and teach them how to be better citizens, teach them teamwork and leadership, coach them through adversity, make them better husbands and fathers. I appreciate the grind of it. Plus it's fun."

Seeing clearly the young man's passion for the game, Favret gave in. "I figured we could use a grunt," he admits. "I never imagined he'd become the head coach of a D1 program."

WHERE IT ALL BEGAN

Silverfield wasted no time impressing the other Hampden-Sydney coaches and earning the respect of his players, many of whom were older than him.

"Ryan quickly went from being a manager to someone I trusted to coach a position," Favret says. "He was responsible and very dependable."

At the end of his sophomore year at just 20 years old, Silverfield was hired full-time as the defensive line coach—a position that required a college degree, which he was still working on. Silverfield was now a full-time college football coach and a full-time college student.

“I had to grow up really quickly,” Silverfield says. “I couldn’t hang out with the guys on the Circle. I couldn’t live in the dorms with the other students.”

The College exchanged housing and tuition in lieu of a salary, so during his last two years at Hampden-Sydney, Silverfield lived in the basement of Gammon Gym in what was affectionately known as the dungeon. It was there that he developed a lasting friendship with Earl Ross, the facility’s custodian. “I would hang out with him late at night as he was doing laundry and I was game planning,” says Silverfield. “There are few people I trust as much as him.”

Mr. Ross wasn’t the only college employee that Silverfield came to rely on during his final two years as a student. He recalls how well his professors supported him in his unusual situation. “The professors really worked with me,” he says. “They would invite me over for dinner to talk about what I may have missed while on the road recruiting or at games.”

STAYING THE COURSE

Silverfield gives all the props to Marty Favret for giving him his start, credits his professors with having his back, and fondly remembers his relationships with Walter “Shorty” Simms and Mr. Ross. But another legendary Hampden-Sydney figure is the reason Silverfield was at Hampden-Sydney to begin with.

With his father and brother having both attended Washington and Lee, Silverfield knew a bit about the small, Virginia liberal arts college life. But Hampden-Sydney caught his eye when then-President Samuel V. Wilson himself visited Silverfield’s high school. Silverfield was blown away that a sitting college president would take the time to visit high schools and talk one-on-one with students. Knowing that General Sam was also teaching classes at the College, Silverfield leapt at the chance to learn from both a college president and a military strategy genius.

Silverfield continued learning from General Sam throughout his time at Hampden-Sydney. He recalls a conversation with General Sam when Silverfield was just 21 years old and trying to figure out his next steps. Although he didn’t know the coaching profession very well, General Sam knew a thing or two about adversity and overcoming.

“General Sam told me that there were going to be obstacles no matter what path I took,” Silverfield says. “He said, ‘You have to stay the course and keep doing the work.’”

Doing the work is not something Silverfield shies away from. Even knowing that his calling lay not in the field of economics but on the football field, Silverfield went above and beyond to graduate cum laude. He handwrote letters to every single Division I coach—more than 100 in

After graduating in 2003, Silverfield moved to offense and coached the tight ends and H-backs. Under his leadership, the Tigers had the nation’s number one scoring offense in the country and scored 45 or more points in seven of its 10 games in 2003.

A LEADER OF MEN

Returning to college football was a welcome transition for Silverfield. “NFL is strictly business,” he says. “In college I can still guide my players and teach them life lessons. I wasn’t giving Brett Favre life advice.”

To do this successfully without offending the hubris of youth, Silverfield says he has to be intentional about building relationships with his guys, a skill at which he excels.

Mike Norvell once said, “Ryan does a wonderful job building relationships...He lives the things we talk about, and he’s a special leader of men.”

Silverfield’s approach takes time. He gets to know each of his players individually. He learns what makes them tick and what motivates them. Silverfield says he often gets incredulous laughs when he tells new recruits that his job is to serve them. Unorthodox as it may be, Silverfield’s coaching philosophy is effective. He’s gained the trust and respect of his players. A fact that was never more evident than when he was named the 25th head football coach at the University of Memphis.

Silverfield seemed to be a natural choice for both the Memphis administration and his players. He was clearly a brilliant coach, having garnered such accolades as finalist for the Broyles Award—an honor bestowed on the country’s best assistant coach—his 2018 offensive total—asking for just a shot at a graduate assistant position.

“I only ever got two responses: one letter from Notre Dame’s Tyrone Willingham and one phone call from Buddy Teevens at Stanford,” Silverfield says. “Neither one of them had a position to offer, but that just taught me that you keep fighting, you keep shaking hands, you keep showing up.”

And that’s exactly what he did for the next 16 years. After leaving Hampden-Sydney in 2004, Silverfield served one season as head coach at Memorial Day High School in Savannah, Georgia. He then coached the quarterbacks at Jacksonville University for one season before serving as a graduate assistant at the University of Central Florida for two. In 2008, Silverfield made his NFL coaching debut as offensive quality control staff with the Minnesota Vikings, remaining with the team for six seasons in various positions. Silverfield then served as an offensive consultant at Toledo in 2014 before becoming the senior offensive analyst at Arizona State for part of 2015. Later that year, he returned to the NFL as an offensive line coach for the Detroit Lions.

In 2016, Mike Norvell was head coach at University of Memphis, and he brought Silverfield, whom Norvell had worked with at Arizona State, onto his staff at University of Memphis as an assistant. Silverfield rose through the ranks quickly at Memphis, being promoted to offensive line coach and run game coordinator in 2018 and again to assistant head coach in 2019.

line being named a semifinalist for the Joe Moore Award—given to the country’s best offensive line—and being ranked the fourth-best recruiter in the American Athletic Conference by 247sports.com in 2017.

Awards and rankings aside though, Silverfield is beloved. In a video of Silverfield’s introduction to the team as head coach, the emotion and energy is palpable. The room is raucous as he enters, and Silverfield disappears amongst the swarm of his players, each of whom is cheering, applauding, and embracing his new coach. The celebration goes on and on, but when the room finally quiets down, Silverfield says simply, “This is my dream job.”

From the moment he arrived at Memphis, Silverfield was being courted for positions in the Big 12, Big Ten, SEC, and NFL. He felt compelled to stay loyal to Memphis, believing strongly in what he was helping to build there. His loyalty paid off when on December 8, 2019, Head Coach Mike Norvell traded his blue suede shoes for a pair of flip flops and took the head coach position at Florida State. With just three weeks until the Tigers of Memphis took on the Lions of Penn State in the 2019 Cotton Bowl Classic, Silverfield was named interim head coach.

Just a week later on December 13, the interim was dropped from his title, and Silverfield’s two decades of dedication to his craft paid off as he earned his first head coach position.

During the press conference announcing his appointment, Memphis athletic director Laird Veatch said that in a meeting prior to Silverfield’s hiring, he asked the players what qualities they wanted to see in their next head coach. The players said they wanted someone real, a competitor, high energy, and someone that truly loved and cared for them.

That last quality arguably sealed the deal for Silverfield. “I knew going into that meeting that Ryan loved his players and they loved him,” Veatch said in the press conference. “What I came out of that meeting with is a clear understanding that he can also hold them accountable and do it the right way.”

Accountability happens to be the foundational element of Silverfield’s coaching philosophy. He says it’s the best way to show his players that he cares. Accountability, providing a good structure, and holding his players to high standards, is Silverfield’s recipe for success.

This approach has worked well for Silverfield, who holds a 21-16 record as head coach with a 2-1 bowl game streak—including his first bowl game, that 2019 Cotton Bowl Classic. Silverfield is the first head coach in program history to win back-to-back bowl titles, and his 21 wins tie him for second-most of any Memphis head coach through three seasons and rank him fifth among the 24 coaches hired in 2020 across the nation. He has also recruited top-60 classes each of the last three years.

Despite a few accolades and records, Silverfield knows it’s a slippery slope to the top, and one season’s winning record means nothing to the next season. “If I don’t grow and improve myself every single day as a coach and a person, it’s a downward spiral really quickly.

That’s what’s given me longevity in this career. I’ve been able to adapt as cultures and players change.”

And both the culture and players are evolving rapidly as the college football conversation focuses on transfer portals, NIL contracts, and conference realignments as often as it focuses on tackles, interceptions, and conversions. No matter how much the landscape changes, though, Coach Silverfield leans on the fundamentals he learned in his earliest days on the job: hard work, grit, and staying the course.

“I’m never going to let anyone outwork me,” he grins. Harkening back to the advice given to him by General Sam, he says, “I think he’d have a smile on his face if he could see where I ended up now.”

General Sam is not the only one smiling at Silverfield’s success. From one great institution to another, Hampden-Sydney says: Go, Tigers!

COMMENCEMENT 2023

In an academic year that saw so many celebrations of the sciences, the commencement address by renowned astrophysicist Neil deGrasse Tyson was a fitting capstone. Dr. Tyson encouraged students to look fondly on their time here as a chapter successfully completed, but not to long for it; to go out and immerse themselves in the world and continue writing the books of their lives. To the class of 2023: Congratulations! We can't wait to see what you do next!

Compass Points Students in the Right Direction

COLLEGE DOESN'T PREPARE STUDENTS.
*It prepares citizens. Leaders.
Innovators. Advocates.
Changemakers. Pioneers.*

To do that well, a college must look beyond its own campus and curriculum and forecast the practical skills and competencies that today's students need to become tomorrow's leaders. At Hampden-Sydney, that effort takes shape in the form of Compass—the College's experiential learning program.

On May 13, 2023, the first class of Hampden-Sydney students who enrolled as freshmen with Compass as a graduation requirement turned their tassels. "This year's graduates really are pioneers," says Elliott Professor of English Sarah Hardy, who has captained the Compass program since its inception. "They taught us about experiential learning as much as they learned from us and had to overcome a lot of adversity in the midst of COVID."

The program got a stellar endorsement from renowned astrophysicist Neil deGrasse Tyson in his 2023 Hampden-Sydney commencement speech. Dr. Tyson said, "Reviewing your curriculum, I noticed you have this Compass program. I love it. I wish we had that when I was in college because it recognizes that not all knowledge is coming from a book."

Compass takes the traditional model of teacher-centered learning—where an instructor deposits information into the mind of a passive learner—and flips it on its head. By positioning the student as both teacher and learner and the instructor as an active facilitator, Compass creates a cyclical dynamic of experience, observation, reflection, and experimentation that deepens and refines the student's understanding of a topic and its place in broader conversations.

Launched in 2019, the program requires that students complete at least three Compass courses, with at least one course having a significant off-campus component such as an internship, study abroad program, or service in the community. Compass has been integrated into the fabric of the College with support from offices like the Ferguson Career Center, the Office of Global Education, and the Flemming Center for Entrepreneurship and Innovation.

"Over the past four years, we have seen how this teaching philosophy of active learning combined with intentional reflection has impacted courses across the whole curriculum," says Professor of Psychology Jenn Vitale, who will assume direction of the program in the fall semester. "These ideas and techniques encourage students to make connections across disciplines and draw links between what they are doing in class and their lives outside of the classroom, expanding and influencing their H-SC experience. In many colleges and universities, the academic and co-curricular components might be kept separate or as part of a program that only some students participate in. At Hampden-Sydney, all of our students are exposed to this approach, and there is a framework for the curricular and co-curricular to be brought together in a really meaningful way."

Faculty and staff aren't the only community members investing in Compass. Thanks to the generosity of supporters like Rob '87 and Cindy Citrone, who committed $6 million in 2019 for the Compass program, more students than ever have access to funding that allows them to have life-changing experiences. If you are interested in supporting Compass, please contact Jennie Porter at (434) 223-6136.

COURSEWORK

Faculty-taught Compass course offerings are varied and fascinatingly innovative. With more than 75 Compass-approved classes, students have myriad ways to explore their interests or develop new ones. Elliott Professor of Physics and Astronomy Stan Cheyne has been teaching Physics of Sound (PHYS 135) for more than 30 years. Students in the fall 2022 class were the first to experience it as a Compass course, which Cheyne says "enhanced their understanding of the subject matter but also fostered a level of independence and problem-solving that the traditional model doesn't always cultivate." Compass invested $50,000 for student travel, supplies, and faculty stipends to support experiential learning coursework this academic year.

SUMMER RESEARCH

H-SC's Department of Undergraduate Research has been empowering students to get hands on in their learning for years. The incorporation of Compass has served to deepen their experiences and help student researchers make important connections between their research topics and the rest of their lives. "With Compass, there is more active consideration of how the work they're doing could contribute to a passion or a vocation after they leave here," says Director of Undergraduate Research Mike Wolyniak. "It gets students thinking: 'What is the point of it all?' It isn't enough to do the work; students need to be thinking about the work's impact on them." Just this summer, Compass distributed $30,000 in aid to undergraduate researchers enrolled in a Research Methods Compass course.

STUDY ABROAD

Hampden-Sydney layers in the Compass magic with global education by having students participate in pre-departure, in-country, and post-country discussions about their experiences. "It's easy to gravitate towards familiar things even when out of your comfort zone in a new country, but incorporating reflection and introducing conversations about how study abroad experience fits into a larger conversation is really impactful for students," says Associate Professor of Modern Languages Julia Palmer. Compass awarded nearly $74,000 in funding to students studying abroad or away in the 2022-23 academic year.

INTERNSHIPS

"Compass gets students thinking more critically about their internships—what they learned, what they contributed, and what about their experience they'd like to explore more," says Assistant Director of Career Education Patrick Jourdain '88. "Because Compass funding has increased access to opportunities and logistics like housing, we have also seen an increase in students seeking internship opportunities." The Ferguson Career Center distributed $75,000 in aid to students participating in the internship Compass course this past year.

BASKETBALL

Hampden-Sydney Basketball enjoyed its finest season in 10 years during 2022-23, finishing with a final overall record of 22-7—14-2 in the Old Dominion Athletic Conference (ODAC)—while advancing to the second round of the NCAA Division III Tournament. The Tigers' 22 overall wins, and the 14 ODAC wins, are the most under fourth-year head coach Caleb Kimbrough since he took over prior to 2019-20 and the program's highest win totals since 2012-13 (23-5, 14-2)—which is also the last time that H-SC advanced to the NCAA Tournament. H-SC was ranked No. 18 nationally in the final 2022-23 D3hoops.com Top 25, their highest end-of-season national ranking since 2003-04 (No. 10).

The contest was tied at 46-46 before the visitors took the lead for good with 15:01 on the clock after a layup by Josiah Hardy '24 (10 points, 8 rebounds) that started a 17-7 run that had the Garnet & Grey ahead 63-53 at 9:27. The Captains managed to get within 63-56 at 8:26, but H-SC pushed the lead to 77-63 with 3:03 remaining after a layup by Ryan Clements '23 (15 points, 4 rebounds). Hubbard secured the largest lead of the night at 81-65 on a slam dunk at 2:09. Alex Elliott '24 (8 points, 6 rebounds) and DJ Wright '24 (4 points, 3 steals) contributed to the huge win, as well. The contest featured 12 lead changes and was tied seven times before H-SC took control over the final 15 minutes for its first win against CNU in 27 years (78-71, March 2, 1995). The Tigers had also won on their last visit to the Captains, 77-73, 35 years ago on December 5, 1987.

"Big road win for the Tigers!" said Kimbrough afterwards. "Proud of the guys for coming off of exams and showing the grit to prepare to take care of business. We have a very selfless team that just keeps getting better."

The first home NCAA Tournament game in 10 years was played against Emory University (GA) on March 3 in front of a very vocal and supportive crowd of 986.

H-SC used a 23-9 first-half run to lead 31-29 at the intermission. The Tigers pushed the lead to 34-29 early in the second half at 19:30 after three quick points by Clements (14 points, 3 steals), but EU tied it at 34-34 with 18:21 remaining. The Tigers led 41-36 at 14:16 following an offensive rebound basket by Hubbard (8 points, 13 rebounds, 4 steals), though EU once again answered and a pair of three-pointers had the visitors in front at 42-41 with 12:33 to play. The lead then changed six times and it was tied twice before the Garnet & Grey took a 52-49 advantage at 7:56 as Hubbard scored four quick points, including a pair of free throws. H-SC led 56-52 following two free throws by Brazil (18 points) with 4:38 on the clock, and the margin was 58-55 after a basket in the lane from Brazil at 3:41. The Eagles tied it at 58-58 with 3:24, but Brazil put the Tigers ahead for good at 61-58 with a deep three-pointer at 2:55. An EU free throw made it 61-59 at 2:41, before Brazil secured the 63-59 victory by making two free throws with just 2.5-seconds remaining. Josiah Hardy (6 points, 5 rebounds), Ayman McGowan '25 (6 points), and DJ Wright (6 points) each contributed, as well. Overall, the game featured nine lead changes and was tied nine times over the 40 minutes, though H-SC led for 28:35 on the night for its first NCAA Tournament win since March 4, 2004 at Elizabethtown (PA) (74-71).

On March 4, in the second round of the NCAA tournament, CNU avenged the December home setback to the Tigers with its 72-59 road win at H-SC. CNU went on to claim its first national title with a 74-72 buzzer-beating victory past the University of Mount Union (OH) on March 18 at the Allen County

There were a lot of big wins throughout the campaign, but no doubt, the highlight of the regular season was an 85-70 road win at then No. 1 and eventual National Champion Christopher Newport University on December 13 in Newport News. H-SC trailed 38-37 at halftime, before outscoring top-ranked CNU 48-32 in the second half to halt the War Memorial Coliseum in Fort Wayne, Indiana—also the site for the 2024 NCAA Division III Men's Basketball Final Four and the ultimate destination sought by the Garnet & Grey next March.

"This season challenged our team with several road games and high-level competition," explained Kimbrough. "We always want to test ourselves early in the season to prepare for ODAC play, and we did just that. We are very proud of the commitment that the team made to our program's vision: To Be The Standard Of Excellence In DIII Basketball. We focused on getting better each and every day, regardless of the outcome of the games. We stayed close and connected as a team, and we were playing great basketball towards the end of the season. This team has a lot to be proud of, and the best is yet to come!"

Coach Kimbrough garnered ODAC Men's Basketball Bob Johnson Coach of the Year honors, while Davidson Hubbard was named First Team All-ODAC, Adam Brazil was named Second Team All-ODAC, and Ryan Clements was named Third Team All-ODAC. BASEBALL

Hampden-Sydney Baseball completed its 2023 season with a final overall record of 20-19, including 13-9 in the ODAC to finish fifth among 12 teams. The Tigers won six of their first seven games, enjoyed a five-game winning streak just past the midway point of the season, and swept their final conference home doubleheader to give 20th-year head coach Jeff Kinne a milestone 400 career collegiate coaching wins.

Coach Kinne is now 401-353-6 overall, including 206-163-1 in ODAC games during his 20 years with the Tigers. It's the second consecutive 20-win season for H-SC, and the 12th under Kinne, who is already the all-time winningest baseball coach at the College.

Highlights from the season-opening successes included a pair of victories on February 18 in Staunton when Ethan Currin '23 slammed four home runs with 10 RBIs to lead the Tigers past Mary Baldwin University (15-4, 7 innings) and Washington College (MD) (14-4)—hitting two homers with five RBIs in each game. H-SC also earned a pair of home-opening wins past Franklin & Marshall College (PA) on February 25 and 26 by scores of 5-4 and 4-3. The latter victory coming in thrilling fashion when Tillman Butler '24 stepped to the plate as a pinch-hitter with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning and promptly slammed a dramatic solo home run to left center field for the exciting walk-off win.

The Tigers also posted wins past nationally-ranked Shenandoah University in Winchester and Randolph-Macon College on Yank Bernier Field at the Ty Cobb Ballpark – Wurdeman Stadium. Owen Tappy '23 was excellent on the mound at No. 9 SU, pitching a complete game victory while going the nine-inning distance and scattering 12 hits and three runs, two

Currin slammed a solo blast over the fence in center field—to the left of the 405 sign—for the early 1-0 advantage in game one that ended in the ninth when Grayson Harris '25 led off with a single to center field, advanced to third base on a double to right field by Masterson, and scored the winning win on a sacrifice fly RBI to left field by Ryan Boyce. Currin provided a two-out, three-run home run to left field—a towering blast for his second of the day and his team-leading sixth homer on the season—in game two. Woodall started and pitched the first 7.0 solid innings, scattering five hits and two runs, unearned, with six strikeouts and no walks.

"The 2023 graduates were exceptional young men on and off the field and we will miss them," said Kinne. "The class was our anchor this year, especially Owen Tappy, who proved to be one of the best pitchers in the south region."

Owen Tappy earned First Team All-ODAC honors, and was also named to the ABCA/Rawlings All-Region 6 Second Team, as well as to the D3baseball.com All-Region 6 Third Team. Off the field, Ryan Boyce, Grayson Harris, and Christian Lancaster '25 were each named a member of the 2023 Academic All-District® Baseball Team as selected by College Sports Communicators. LACROSSE

The Tigers won eight-straight games in the middle of the season and 11 of 12 games with the only loss coming against the No. 2 ranked team in the country. ODAC competition at the top was fierce with two games separating the top four teams in the league.

"I am proud of our seniors for their leadership and of our entire team for all that we were able to accomplish as a program this year," said Rostan. "There were certainly some great highlights including our fall trip to Cortland, New York, and the Onondaga Reservation; a four-overtime home regular season victory with No. 10 ranked Washington and Lee; a great win at Roanoke; earning the ODAC Tournament bye and No. 2 seed after an 8-1 regular season record in one of the top conferences nationally; and a 13-5 overall record." He added, "Our student-athletes worked hard all year to maintain a top 20 ranking among nearly 250 Division III lacrosse teams for nearly the entire season; additionally, our student-athletes took great pride in the classroom, earning the USILA Team Academic award yet again. In the end, we were most likely one win away from an NCAA Tournament bid and we will again strive to earn that opportunity in 2024."

One of the team's best games this season was its March 29 home matchup against Washington and Lee University. The game, played on Fulton Field at Lewis C. Everett Stadium, went four overtimes before Campion White '25 sent the crowd home happy early into the fourth overtime. Will Perry '23 made three big saves in overtime, out of 15 total saves, to keep the Tigers alive.
